Pedestrian Accident Case Review Checklist

Bring what you have. Missing information does not always mean you do not have a case.

Bring These Records

- [ ] Medical records, bills, and injury photos
- [ ] Your notes about how the crash happened
- [ ] Traffic accident report number
- [ ] Any letters, emails, or texts from insurers

You do not need a complete file to get a legal review.

Details About the Driver and Vehicle

- [ ] Driver name and contact details, if known
- [ ] License plate, vehicle photos, or vehicle description
- [ ] Owner or registration details, if available
- [ ] Anything showing the driver may have been working

These details can help identify liability and available coverage.

Witnesses and Missing Evidence

- [ ] Witness names and contact information
- [ ] Photos, videos, or nearby camera locations
- [ ] A list of records you do not have yet
- [ ] Questions about what evidence can still be requested

Missing evidence does not automatically mean you have no claim.

Insurance and Recovery Questions

- [ ] Driver insurance information, if known
- [ ] Any denial, exclusion, or no-coverage notice
- [ ] Questions about other responsible parties
- [ ] Questions about whether compensation may be collectible

A valid claim does not guarantee payment, but a lawyer can review your options.

Helpful Reminder

A case review helps separate what is known, what is missing, and what still needs to be confirmed.
